TALMAGE'S SERMON.

The Weekly Dircourse of the Great Brooklyn Preacher.

TEXT: The time of my departure is at hand.—I Timothy iv., 6.

The way out of this world is so blocked up with coffin and hearse, and undertaker's spade and screwdriver, that the Christian can hardly think as he ought of the most cheerful hardy think as he ought of the mest cheerful passage in all his history. We hang black instead of white over the place where the good man gets his last victory. We stand weeping over a heap of chains which the freed soul has shaken off, and we say: "Poor man! What a pity it was he had to come to this!" Come to what! By the time the people have assembled at the obsequies the man has been three days as heapy the people have assembled at the obsequies the man has been three days so happy that all the joy of earth accumulated would be wretchedness beside it, and he might better weep over you because you have to stay, than you weep over him because he has to go. It is a fortunate thing that a good man does not have to wait to see his own observies they would be set. "thing that a good man does not have to wait to see his own obsequies, they would be so discordant with his own experience. If the Israelites should go back to Egypt and mourn over the brick kilns they once left, they would not be any more silly than that Christian who should forsake heaven and come down and mourn because he had to leave this world. Our ideas of the Christian's death are morbid and sickly. We look upon it as a dark hole, in which a man stumbles when his breath gives out. This whole subject is odorbreath gives out. This whole subject is odor-ous with varnish and disinfectants, instead of being sweet with mignonette. Paul, in my text, takes that great clod of a word, "death," and throws it away, and speaks of his "de-parture"—a beautiful, bright, suggestive word, descriptive of every Christian's re-

Now, departure implies a starting place and a place of destination. When Paul left this world what was the starting point! It was a scene of great physical dis ress. It was the Tulianum, the lower dungeon of the Mamertine prison. The top dungeon was bad enough, it having no means of ingress or egress but through an opening in the top. Through that the prisoner was lowered, and through that came all the food and air and light received. It was a terrible place, that upper dungeon; but the Tullianum the lower dungeon, and that was more wretched, the only light and the only air coming through the roof, and that roof the floor of the upper dungeon. That was Paul's last earthly residence. It was a dungeon just six feet and a half high. It was a doleful place. It had the chill of long centuries of dampness. It was fifthy with the last interesting of miserable work has the centuries of dampness. It was fifthy with the long incarceration of miserable wretches. It was there that Paul spent his last days on earth, and it is there that I see him to-day, in the fearful dungeon, shivering, blue with the cold, waiting for that old overcoat which he had sent for up to Troas, and which they had not yet sent down, notwithstanding he bad written for it.

If some skilful surgeon should go into that dungeon where Paul is incarcerated, we might find out what are the prospects of Paul's livg through the rough in short of seventy. At that very time when he most needs the warmth and the sunlight, and the fresh air, he is shut out from the sun. What are those scars on his ankles? ose were gotten when he was fast, his feet in the stocks. Every time he turned, the flesh on his ankles started. What are those scars on his back? You know he was whipped five times, each time getting thirty-nine strokes-195 bruises on the back (count them!) made by the Jews with rods of elmwood, each one of the 195 strokes bringing the blood. Look at Paul's face and look at his arms. Where did he get those bruises! I think it was when he was struggling ashore amidst the shivered timbers of the shipwreck. I see a gash in Paul's side. Where did he get that? I think he got that in the tussel with highwaymen, for he had been in peril of robbers and he had money of his own. He was a mechanic as well as an apostle, and I think the tents he made were as good as his sermons.

There was a wanness about Faul's looks.

What makes that! I think a part of that came from the fact that he was for twenty-four hours on a plank in the Mediterranean sea, suffering terribly, before he was rescued; for he says posifore he was rescued; for he says posi-tively: "I was a night and a day in the deep." Oh, worn out, emaciated old man! surely you must be melancholy, No constitution could endure this and be cheerful. But I press my way through the prison until I come up close to where he is, and by the faint light that streams through the prison the complete the complet the opening I see on his face a supernatural joy, and I bow before him, and I say joy, and I bow before him, and I say: "Aged man, how can you keep cheerful amidst all this gloom?" His voice startles the darkness of the place as he cries out: "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand." Hark! what is that shuffling of feet in the upper dungeon? Why, Paul has an invitation to a banquet, and he is going to dine to day with the king. Those shuffling feet are the feet of the executioners. They come, and they cry down through the hole of the dungeron: "Hurry up, old man. Come now; get yourself ready." Why, Paul was ready. He had nothing to pack up. He had no baggage to take. He had been ready a good while. I see him rising up, and straightening out his stiffened limbs, and pushing back his white hair from his creviced forehead, and I see him looking up through the hole in the roof of the dungeon into the face of his execution, and hear him say; now ready to be offered, at the time of my departure is at hand." Then they lift hin out of the dungeon, and they start with him to the place of execution. They say: "Hurry along, old man, or you will feel the weight of our spear. Hurry along." "How far is it," says Paul, "we have to travel?" "Three miles." Three have to travel?" "Three miles." Three miles is a good way for an old man to travel after he has beet, whipped and crippled with maltreatment. But they soon get to the place of execution—Acquae Talvia—and he is fastened to the pillar of martyrdom. It does not take any strength to tie him fast. He makes no resistance. O Paul! why not strike for your life? You have a great many friends here. With that withered hand just launch the thunderbolt of the people upon the se infamous soldiers. No! Paul ple upon these infamous soldiers. No! Paul was not going to interfere with his own coro-nation. He was too glad to go. I see him looking up into the face of his executioner, and, as the grim official draws the sword, Paul calmly says: "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand." But I put my hand over my eyes. I want not to see that last struggle. One sharp, keen stroke, and Paul does go to the banquet and Paul does dine with the What a transition it was! From the malaria of Rome to the finest climate in all the universe—the zone of eternal beauty and health. His ashes were put in the catacombs of Rome, but in one moment the air of heaven bathed from his soul the last ache. From shipwreck, from dungeon, from the biting pain of the alm-wood rods, from the sharp sword of in) headsman, he goes into the most brilliant multitudes of the sainthood rushing out and stretching forth hands of welcome; for I do really think that as on the right hand of God is Christ, so on the right hand of Christ is Paul, the second great in heaven. Before the He changed kings likewise. Before the hour of death and up to the last moment he was under Nero, the thick necked, the features of that man bringing down to us to this very day the horrible to us to this very day the horrible possibilities of his nature—seated as he was amidst pictured marbles of Egypt, under a root adorned with mother of under a root adorned with mother of pearl, in a dining room, which by ma-chinery was kept whirling day and night iorses standing in stalls of solid gold, and the grounds around his palace lighted at night by its victims, who had been daubed with tar and pitch and then set fire to illumine the darkness. That was Paul's king. But the next moment he goes into the realm of Him whose reign is love, and whose courts are paved with love, and whose courts are paved with love, and whose scepter is adorned with jewels of love, and whose scepter is adorned with jewels of love, and whose palace is lighted with love, and whose lifetime is an eternity of love. When Paul was leaving so much on this side the pillar of martyrdom to gain so ninch on the other side, do you wonder at the cheerful valedictory of the text: "The time of my departure is at text; "The time of my departure is at Now, why cannot all the old people of this congregation have the same holy gless that aged man had? Charles I., when he was combing his head, found a gray hair, and he sent it to the queen as a great joke; but old age is really no joke at all. For the last forty years you have been dreading that which ought to have being an exhibitantion. You say you must fear the struggle at the moment the soul and body part. But millions have endured that moment, and why not we as well? They got through with it, and so can we. Besides this, all medical men agree in saying that there is probably no struggle at all at the last moment—not so much pain as the prick of a pin, the seeming much pain as the prick of a pin, the seeming signs of distress being altogether involuntary. But you say: "It is the uncertainty of the future." Now, child of God, do not play the infidel. After God has filled the Bible till it. can hold no more with the stories of the good things ahead, better not talk about uncer-

But you say: "I cannot bear to think of parting from friends here." If you are old you have more friends in heaven than you have more friends in heaven than here. Just take the census. Take some large sheet of paper and begin to record the names of those who have emigrated to the other shore; the companions of your school days, your early business associates, the friends of mid life and those who more recently went away. Can it be that they have been gone so long you do not care any more about them and you do not want their society! Oh, no! There have been days when you have felt that you could not endure it another moment away from their blessel companionship. They could not endure it another moment away from their blessel companionship. They have gone. You say you would not like to bring them back to this world of trouble, even if you had the power. It would not do to trust you. God would not give you resurrection power. Before to-morrow morning you would be rattling at the gates of the cemetery, crying to the departed: "Come back to the cradle where you slept! Come back to the hall where you used to play! Come back to where you used to play! Come back to the table where you used to sit!" and there would be a great burglary in heaven. No, no! God will not trust you with resurrection power, but he compromises the matter and says: "You cannot bring them where you are." They are more lovely now than ever.

are." They are more lovely now than ever.
Were they beautiful here, they are more beautiful there.
Besides that, it is more healthy there for you than here, aged man; better climate there than these hot summers and cold there than these hot summers and cold winters and late springs; better hearing; better eye-sight; more tonic in the air; more perfume in the bloom; more sweet-ness in the song. Do you not feel, aged man, sometimes, as though you would like to get your arm and foot free! Do you not feel as though you would like to throw away spectages and causes and controlles? Would on not like to feel the spring and ticity and mirth of an eternal boy-hood! When the point at which you start from this world is old age, and the point to which you go is eternal juvenescence, aged man, clap your hands at the anticipation, and say, in perfect rapture of soul: time of my departure is at hand." I remark, again, all those ought to fee this joy of the text who have a holy curiosity to know what is beyond this earthly terminus. And who has not any curiosity about it? Paul, I suppose, had the most satisfactory view of heaven, and he says: "It doth not yet appear what we shall be." It is like looking through a broken telescope: "Now we see through a glass darkly," Can you tell me anything about that heavenly place? You ask me a thousand questions about it that I cannot answer. I ask you a thousand questions about it that you cannot answer. And do you wonder that Paul was so glad when martyrdom gave him a chance to go over and make discoveries in that blessed country/

I hope some day, by the grace of God, to go over and see for myself; but not now. No well man, no prospered man, I think, wants to go now. But the time will come, I think, when I shall go over. I want to see what they do there, and I want to see how they do it. I do not want to be looking through the gates ajar want them to swing open. 10,000 things I want explained—about you f, about the government orld, about God, about We start in a plain myself, about his world, ab about this everything. We start in a plant path of what we know, and in a minute come up against a high wall of minute come up against a high wall of the wall of looks over there. Somebody tells me it is like a paved city—paved with gold; and another man tells me it is like a fountain, and it is like a tree, and it is like a triumphal procession, and the next man 1 meet tells me it is all figurative. I really want to know, after the body is resurrected, what they wear and what they eat; and I have an immeasurable curiosity to know what it is, and how it where it is. Columbus risked his find this continent, and shall we shudde to go out on a voyage of discovery which shall reveal a vaster and more differen country! John Franklin risked his life to find a passage between icebergs, and shall we dread to find a passage to eternal summer? Men in Switzerland travel up the heights of the Matterhorn with alpenstock and guides and rockets and ropes, and getting half way up, stumble and fall down in a terrible massacre. They just want to say they had been on the tops of those high peaks. And shall we fear to go out for the ascent of the eternal hills, which start a thousand miles beyond where ston the highest sand miles beyond where stop the highest peaks of the Alps, and when in that ascent there is no peril? A man doomed to die stepped on the scaffold and said in joy: in ten minutes I will know great secret." One minute after the vital functions ceased the little child that died last night in Montague street knew more Jonathan Edwards, or St. Paul self, before he died. Friends, the exit from this world, or death, if you please to call it, to the Christian is glorious explanation. It is demonstration. It is illu-mination. It is sunburst. It is the opening of all the windows. It is shutting up of all the scrolls of positive and ac curate information. Instead of stand-ing at the foot of the ladder and looking up, it is standing at the top of the ladder and looking down. It is the last mystery taken out or botany, and geology, and astronomy, and theology. Oh, will it not be grand to have all questions answered? The perpetually recurring inter-rogation point changed for the mark of exclamation. All riddles solved. Who will fear to go out on that discovery when all the questions are to be decided which we have been discussing all our lives? Who shall not clap his hands in the anticipation of that noise curiosity, crying: "The time of my deblessed country, it it be no better than through I remark again, we ought to have the joy of the text, because, leaving this world, we move

The Bible intimates that we will talk The Bible intimates that we will talk with Jesus in heaven just as a brother talks with a brother. Now, what will you ask him first! I do not know. I can think what I would ask Paul first, if I saw him in heaven. I think I would like to hear him describe the storm that came upon the ship when there were 275 souls on the vessel, Paul being the only man on board cool enough to describe the storm. There is a fascination about a ship and the sea that I shall never get over, and I think I would like to hear him talk about that first. But when I meet my Lord Jesus first. But when I meet my Lord Jesus Christ, of what shall I first delight to hear Him speak? Now I think what it is, I shall first want to hear the tragedy of his last hours; and then Luke's account of the crucifixion, and John's account of the crucifixion will be nothing; while from the cifixion will be nothing, while from the living lips of Christ the story shall be told of the gloom that fell, and the devils that arose, and the fact that upon his endurance depended the resuce of a race; and there was darkness in the sky, and there was darkness in the soul, and the pain became more sharp, and the burdens became more heavy, until the mobbegan to swim away from the dying vision of Christ, and the cursing of the mob came to his ear more faintly, and his hands were fastened to the horizontal piece of the cross, and his feet were fastened to the perpendicular piece of the cross, and his head fell forward in a swoon as he uttered the last moan and cried: "It is finished!" All heaven will stop to listen until the story is done, and every harp will be put down, and every lip closed, and alleyes fixed upon the divine narrator, until the story is done; and then, at the tap of the baton, the eternal orchestra will rouse up; finger on string of harp, and began to swim away from the dying vision of will rouse up; finger on string of harp, and lips to the mouth of trumpet, there shall roll forth the oratorio of the Messiah: "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive bless-ing, and riches, and honor, and glory, and power, world without end?"

What he endured, ob, who can tell, To save our souls from death and hell? When there was between Paul and that magnificent personage only the thinness of the sharp edge of the sword of the executioner, do you wonder that he wanted to go! Oh, my Lord Jesus, let one wave of that glory roll over this auditory! Hark! I hear the wedding bells of heaven ringing now. The marriage of the Lamb has come, and the bride hath made herself ready.

Death of Krupp, the Gun Founder. A. Krupp, the well-known German metal under and gigantic steel gun manufacturer, died on the 14th inst., at his villa near Essen, Rhenish Prussia. Herr Krupp was born at Essen in 1812. He acceeded his father, F. Krupp, as proprietor the cast steel works at Essen. He was the discoverer of the method of casting steel in large masses, and sent to the London exhibition of 1851 a crucible block weighing 2 1-4 tons and to the Paris exhibition of 1867 one of 40 tons. He gradually developed the Es-sen works, which had come into his father's possession in 1896 to an ssion in 1826, to an enormous extent. In 3 they covered an area of 965 acres and pro need more than 125,000 tons of cast steel pesides great quantities of finished articles. They were still further extended in 1874. The works are connected with the main Rhenish railway lines, and contain more han 30 miles of railway tracks. It employs about 12,000 men, besides 5000 more mines and smelting works. The total num-ber of employes in all branches is about 20,000. Krupp was the first to introduce un-welded cast steel ties for use upon railways, but is chiefly noted for his wonderful improvements in heavy siege guns, which have produced during the past few years a complete evolution in ordnance and gunnery.

offects of the extreme heat at Chicago. 'There has never been anything like it in the city before," said a coroner. "I can't see what we are going to do. The number of bodies awaiting the verdict of the coroner's jury is hourly increasing. Our force, which is much too small even for ordinary purposes is not large enough to do a quarter of the work as it should be done. It will take days with our force before our work on the present lead can be finished. Some complaints have already come to us. I wonder that there are cases before us is greater than ever."

The scene at the coroner's office is indeed terrible. The room is crowded, all bent on the same errand—to report the name of a victim of the heat and plead for an early certificate. Now and then one appears who has been there before, and begs that an inquest be held as soon as possible, as the body is be-gining to decay. Coroner's deputies places to visit. Above all the commotion can be heard the almost constant ringing of the telephone bell, each ring preceding the news tim is not now taken, simply the place where the body lies. A "sudden death" is noted on the books, and later a deputy is sent to hold the inquest. When it is remembered that a that evidence must be taken before a verdict can be given, and that there are but four men who are authorized to do this work, one can realize the difficulty of the situation.
